It is said that ex-President Harrison recently declined a tendered fee of $10,000 by the State Liquor League, of Indiana, to appear as their counsel to argue against the constitutionality of a liquor law recently passed. He thought it was a movement in the right direction and wouldn't for $10,000 try to knock it out.

That Cincinnati boy who was told by his employer to fix up the show window so that every woman who passed would be sure to stand and look in, didn't mean to cast any reflections on the women, but he struck a happy idea when he hung a black velvet cloth in the back ground, thus converting the window into a mirror. It worked like a charm, and his boss gave him $3 extra that week.

That pious Connecticut parson who thanked the Lord that there had been frost enough to nip the apple blossoms in that section, and hoped he would swing the freeze around so as to take in all the apple blossoms and thus freeze out the cider crop, ought to have been consistent and wanted an installment of frost on the corn, barley and wheat and thus freeze out the whiskey and beer crops. SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE

At Market Street M. E. Church—Many Delegates Present—Mr. W. G. Burkhead President and Mr. E. N. Penny Secretary.

The Sunday School Conference of Wilmington District M. E. Church South is holding its sessions in Market Street church.

The Conference met Wednesday night, when W. G. Burkhead, Esq., of Whiteville, was made president and Mr. E. N. Penny secretary.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. W. L. Cunninggim, pastor of Fifth Street Methodist church.

The Conference re-assembled yesterday morning at 9.30 o'clock.

The exercises began by a song service followed by an address of welcome delivered by Rev. M. T. Plyer, which was responded to handsomely by President Burkhead.

Reports were then presented from the various Sunday schools throughout the district. Many of these reports were very gratifying, showing improvement and increase in attendance and efficiency.

The principal feature of the morning session was an address by W. H. Townsend, showing the necessity of the pupil's conversion, and the great aim of Sunday schools.

Rev. T. J. Gatis, of Durham, N. C., agent and colporteur for the North Carolina M. E. Church Conference, was present and made an address, full of encouragement to Sunday school workers; he also presented the claims of his work and called attention to many valuable books in his hands for distribution.

The session adjourned with the benediction until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

Conference assembled at 4 p. m. The principal features of the session were an address by Rev. L. S. Etheridge, of Carver's Creek circuit, on the efficiency and necessity for the Circuit Sunday School Conference, and an address by Rev. D. C. Geddie, of Magnolia, on the qualification and preparation of Sunday school teachers.

An essay on "Our Duties to the Sunday School," was ready by Miss Mary S. Devane, a delegate from Carver's Creek Circuit. It was admirably written and well read, and received much commendation.

Last night Rev. D. C. Geddie delivered a sermon.

The conference will meet again at 9.30 this morning in Market Street church.

There is a large attendance at the sessions, both of delegates and spectators.

Bryant-Shepard.

Mr. W. H. Bryant, one of Wilmington's most popular young men, and Miss Etta L. Shepard, of Topsail Sound, the charming and lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Shepard, were happily married Wednesday, June 12th, by the Rev. Mr. Norman, of Grace Church. The attendants were Mr. R. A. Curtis with Miss Stella Bennett, Mr. Earnest Ellsworth with Miss Olivia Dardon, Mr. James Bryant with Miss Lula Stevens, Mr. Edward Bryant with Miss Mattie King.

The bride and groom repaired to the residence of the groom's father, Mr. J. T. Bryant, of Wilmington, where they held a reception. Mr. and Mrs. Bryant will make their home in the city.

A Seven Years' Sentence.

A dispatch from Charlotte yesterday stated that Cashier Holland of the Merchants' and Farmers' National Bank of that city pleaded guilty in the U. S. District Court to the charge of embezzling funds of the bank, and was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the penitentiary at Albany, New York.

The Late Jas. M. Pearce.

The funeral services of the late Jas. M. Pearce, engineer of the steamer Wilmington, took place yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, in Southport. Rev. W. S. Ballard of the Methodist Church and Rev. Oliver Rider of the Baptist Church conducted the services, which were largely attended, all Southport having turned out to do honor to his memory.

DEATH OF MR. R. E. HEIDE,

Vice Consul of Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

After a long and lingering illness, Mr. Rudolph E. Heide, a respected citizen of Wilmington, died at his residence on South Second street, yesterday morning at 7.15 o'clock, in the 66th year of his age.

Mr. Heide for years past has been Vice Consul in this city for Denmark, Norway and Sweden. He was born in Denmark in 1832; was the oldest of five brothers, all but one of whom, the second brother, an officer in the Danish army who was killed in the war with Prussia, emigrated to this country. Their father was a nobleman, Baron Von Heide, and he also was killed while fighting for his king and country. The title and the estates descended to the oldest son. In 1853, when but 21 years of age, Baron Von Heide renounced his title and came to the United States. He landed in New York in 1853; in 1854 he came to Wilmington and in 1855 he went to Fayetteville, where the opening of the war found him. He warmly espoused the cause of the South and as a member of the Fayetteville Light Infantry, in the First N. C. regiment, he was present at the battle of Bethel. He was afterwards in the Confederate service with Col. Lamb at Fort Fisher, where he did true and effective service. He returned to Fayetteville at the close of the war but soon after removed to Wilmington and engaged in the grocery and commission business here. He was a member of St. John's church and had been for many years, and was also a member of the Royal Arcanum and the American Legion of Honor.

Mr. Heide married in Fayetteville, and his wife died in this city about three years ago. He leaves five children, two sons and three daughters, the latter all married. But one of his children, his youngest son, George, remains in Wilmington. His surviving brothers are Mr. Henry Heide, a former officer in the Danish army, who now resides in New York; Mr. Christian H. Heide, a truck farmer near the city, and Mr. Alex. S. Heide, a merchant in business here.

The funeral services will take place at 10 o'clock this morning from St. John's church and the interment will be in Oakdale by the side or his wife.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR.

Assistant Secretary McAdoo, of the Navy Department, Expected Here Saturday.

Lieutenant Commander George L. Morton, of the North Carolina Naval Battalion, received a telegram last night from Commander Winslow, that Assistant Secretary of the Navy Wm. McAdoo would reach here Saturday on the U. S. dispatch boat Dolphin to inspect the Wilmington Division Naval Reserves and the monitor Nantucket. The Dolphin is one of the fastest vessels in the Navy, and will probably come up to the city, as she draws only twelve feet of water.

The visit of the Assistant Secretary should be appreciated by the public generally, and a royal welcome accorded. Capt. Harriss Northrop, with the Wilmington Light Infantry and the Second Regiment Band have been invited to turn out with the boys of the Naval Battalion on this occasion.

Lieut. J. C. Morrison and Lieut. Commander Geo. L. Morton are hard at work making arrangements for the gala occasion.

Base Ball.

Schenk's Black Stockings and the Excelsior colored team of Newbern, played ball yesterday afternoon at Hilton Park. The game resulted in a score of 13 to 3 in favor of Wilmington. The game was exceedingly fine up to the 7th inning. Mr. Albert Prempert was umpire and Mr. Thomas H. Wright scorer. Both gave satisfaction.

Death of Mr. Jno. M. Rose.

A dispatch from Fayetteville, N. C., received in Wilmington, announced the death in that city yesterday at 10.45 a. m., of Mr. Jno. M. Rose, secretary of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad Company, after a short illness resulting from a recent attack of grip. Mr. Rose had been secretary of the C. F. & Y. V. R. R. ever since its organization, and for years before had held the same position with the Western N. C. Railroad Company. All his life had been spent in Fayetteville, where he was universally honored and esteemed.

WAKE FOREST COLLEGE

Commencement Exercises—Annual Address—New Trustees Elected—Degrees Conferred—The Graduating Class—Diplomas Distributed—Declamations—Concert.

[Star Correspondence.]

WAKE FOREST, June 12, 1895.

The Commencement exercises of Wake Forest College are attended by numbers of her patriotic sons and a goodly number of daughters. Special trains coming from different directions continue to bring an additional number of happy people.

The alumni address by Prof. W. L. Poteat Tuesday night brings forth encomiums on all sides. His subject was, "Culture and Faith." It was a credit to the gentleman and reflects great credit on the institution.

To-day the annual address to the literary societies was delivered by Capt. T. W. Mason. The Captain took as his subject, 'What Shall We Make of the State?" The oration was a masterpiece, abounding in eloquence and pathos. Mr. Mason simply captivated the audience and no description of the speech or its delivery can do it justice. As an orator Mr. Mason is among the foremost in North Carolina.

At night Rev. W. H. Wharton, a prominent Baptist divine from Baltimore, delivered the baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class.

To-morrow the graduating exercises proper take place.

The Board of Trustees at their meeting elected three new Trustees to fill vacancies. They are N. B. Broughton, Raleigh; W. C. Dowd, of the Charlotte News and J. B. Browa, of Hertford.

The degrees conferred were: D. D.—W. R. Gwaltney, Wake Forest; J. B. Richardson, High Point; E. E. Frek, Nashville, Tenn.; A. M. Sims, Raleigh; H. A. Brown, Winston, and E. M. Poteat, New Haven, Conn.

L.L.D.—W. T. Faircloth, J. P. Green, President William-Jewell College, Missouri; J. B. Gambrell, President Mercer College, Georgia.

The Junior Class gave a banquet last night, which is a new innovation here. Mr. J. H. Gore, of Wilmington, responded to the toast, "College Athletics."

Rev. W. B. Morton, Louisburg, was elected President of the Alumni Association.

Among the prominent persons here are Gov. Carr, C. M. Cooke, E. W. Timberlake, Stephen B. Weeks, J. C. Scarborough, Col. H. C. Dockery, Dr. Blackwell of Elizabeth City, and Dr. Pritchard of Charlotte.

An athletic exhibition was given this evening, which was postponed yesterday on account of the rain.

THURSDAY.

To-day saw the last of the Wake Forest Commencement, and the class of '95, numbering twenty-three, received their diplomas.

Although the weather was threatening still a good number braved the elements and comfortably filled the old Wingate Memorial Hall. The miserable weather prevented the people, and the pretty girls especially—who are many—from enjoying the beauty of the campus, yet the time was merrily passed away in the different buildings.

The exercises were most enjoyable and the speakers fully sustained the reputation of those of former classes which preceded them. After the offering of prayer, the speeches by members of the Senior class were delivered. The speakers and their subjects were:

Salutatory Address, Samuel Roland Buxton, Jackson, N C.

"The Dixie Dollar," William Carey Newton, Clayton, N C.

"Mingling Voices," James Vance Devenny, Wake Forest, N C.

"An Unpaid Debt," John Hosea Kerr, Jr, Caswell county, N C.

"Distant Enchantments," Isaac Sebert Boyles, Pilot Mountain, N C.

"North Carolina and American Independence," Raleigh Travers Daniel, Weldon, N C.

"Wake Forest and Her Young Alumni," John A Oates, Jr, Sampson county, N C.

Valedictory Address, Frank Earl Parham, Granville county, N C.

Dr. Taylor delivered the baccalaureate sermon immediately after the speeches. He counselled the graduates who were standing before him with excellent advice. The address was full of practical common sense and sound wisdom. Dr. Taylor then conferred the degrees on the graduates. They are:

B. L.—B L Ward.

B. A.—R T Allen, R T Daniel, W C Newton, J S Boyles, M P Davis, J O Oates, Jr., S R Benton, H W Early, F E Parham, W J Christian, Jr., O L Hoffman, J O Rogers, J L Cornwell, J M Holding, W Royall, J M Kerr, Jr.

M. A.—L A Beasly, W Durham, H Long, J V Devery, R H Haywood, J R Moore.

Those among the graduating class who delivered thesis, with the subjects are:

Wadsworth—The Man and the Poet, Robert T Allen, Wake Forest; The Plays of Beaumont and Fletcher, Luther A. Beasley, Duplin county; The Economics of Good Roads, William J Christian Jr, Durham; The Downfall of Athens, John L Cornwell, Cleveland county; Prince of Poets, Monrovia P. Davis, Yadkin county; The Origin and Development of the English Drama, Herbert W Earley, Bertie county; England and the Renaissance, Oliver L. Hoffman, Burke county; The Puritans in England, J Malcolm Holding, Wake Forest; Shelley's Case, Hugh Long, Union county; The Early Church in England, Jno R Moore, Robeson county; The Chemistry of Common Life, John A Rogers, Harnett county; Mental Culture, William Royall, Wake Forest.

At night the First Regiment Band gave a concert, which was quite a success musically. The Society halls were thrown open to all the guests after the concert, where the evening was pleasantly spent.

This was the ending of the 61st Commencement, one of the most successful and pleasant in the history of the institution.

For Carolina Beach and Southport To-day.

The K. of P. drum corps boys were out yesterday drumming for a big crowd on their trip to the Beach and Southport to-day. They hope to realize enough to pay for new uniforms. It is a worthy cause and deserving of patronage. The boat leaves at 9 o'clock a. m. and 3 p. m. There will be music for dancing and refreshments will be served on the boat. The committee of arrangements who will see to the comfort of all who take in the excursion, are Messrs. E. C. Warren, Will. P. Platt, Jas. H. Cowan, Frank P. Turrentine and Horace G. Springer.

Buy No Others.

All persons are hereby cautioned against buying copies of the STAR offered for sale on the streets unless, in every case, the words "For Transient Sale" are stamped on the margin of the paper. Should any newsboy or carrier offer for sale a copy of the STAR not so stamped he should be promptly reported at this office.

RALEIGH NEWS BUDGET.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES AT THE A. AND M. COLLEGE.

Annual Concert at St. Mary's—Sudden Death—Convicts Sent to Rocky Mount—The Arrington Tribunal—Board of Agriculture.

[Star Correspondence.]

RALEIGH, N. C., June 13.

The body of Walter Fowler, an employe of the Raleigh Cotton Mills, was found this morning about nine o'clock in Devereux branch, near the city limits. The body was lying in only three inches of water, and was discovered by young boys, who were in the meadow throwing stones at birds. The last seen of Fowler was yesterday about ten o'clock, when he was then on his way to the branch. The prevailing theory as to the manner of his death and the probable one is, that Fowler while standing near the water must have been seized with a fit or an attack of vertigo and fell over in the stream. There are no evidences of foul play, and he could not have been drowned in three inches of water unless he was unconscious at the time. No inquest was held. It has been ascertained that he was on a spree the day before. He also complained of pain in his head before leaving for the scene of his death.

A squad of thirty or forty convicts will be sent to Rocky Mount in a few days to construct a dam in that place.

It is said that the ordinance recently passed by the Board of Aldermen taxing countrymen and venders of farm and garden products for the privilege of selling their goods on the four streets around the market, is unconstitutional and in opposition to the laws of the State.

Governor Campbell, the dethroned Chief Justice of the Arrington Tribunal of Talents, is now driving about the streets of Raleigh, awaiting the arrival of the other Justices. The Governor's appearance on the streets creates a ripple of laughter—even among street urchins.

The annual concert at St. Mary's took place last night. The numerous and difficult selections, which were all charmingly rendered, showed that the pupils had attained a high degree of efficiency in music. The class day exercises were also held. The officers were: President, Miss Fair Payne; Secretary, Miss Lula Briggs; Prophet, Miss Maggie Hill; Historian, Miss Marie Walker; Orator, Miss Lizzie Cobb; Poet, Miss Eleanor Vass.

The Board of Agriculture at their meeting yesterday transacted only routine matters pertaining to the Agricultural College. They went into executive session again this morning. The Board will probably be here to-morrow.

The commencement exercises at the A. & M. College closed yesterday, with the conferring of degrees upon the graduating class.

The orations delivered by members of the class, with the subjects were:

"Looking Aloft," M. B. Hunter, Mecklenburg county; "Recent Chemical Advances," J. A. Bizzell, Cumberland county; "The Elevation of Labor," J. C. Dey, Currituck county; "Man and the Machine," H. Wiswall, Jr., Beaufort county; "Brains as a Fertilizer," W. A. Bullock, Vance county.

President Holliday presented the diplomas, giving the graduates practical and wise advice.

[Special Star Telegram.]

Mr. Wm. McAdoo, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, will visit Wilmington on the Dolphin, to inspect the Naval Reserves some time after July 15th. The Reserves have been notified to prepare for his reception.

The Board of the A. & M. College decided to add a new professorship to the faculty with the title of Professor of Mechanical Engineering, the salary not to exceed $1,500. The mess hall system will be inaugurated next year as the present arrangement is unsatisfactory to the students. The Board also passed a resolution confining the playing of athletic games with colleges in the State.

Excursionists From Newbern.

An excursion of four coaches arrived yesterday morning over the W. N. & N. R. R. from Newbern, composed mostly of colored people. Among the party was the Excelsior Base Ball Club and a Lodge of the order of Good Samaritans (colored).

In the afternoon the Wilmington Lodge of Good Samaritans escorted the visiting lodge to St. Stephen's church, where an address was delivered by Rev. M. Moore, of St. Luke's church. After a meeting of the annual Grand Session, the lodges, headed by the Enterprise colored band, escorted the visiting lodge to Ruth Hall where a reception was held.

DIED,

HEIDE.—At his residence in this city, yesterday (Thursday) morning, at 7.15 o'clock, Mr. RUDOLPH E. HEIDE, in the 66d year of his age.

Fanersl this (Friday) morning, at 10 o'clock, from St. John's Church, corner Third and Red Cross Streets. Friends and acquaintances are requested to attend.

STATE BANKS.

A respected correspondent, who agrees with the STAR that State banks ought to be re established, asks us whether we would favor making the notes issued a full legal tender and whether we would favor State or Federal supervision. It may be somewhat premature to discuss the particular kind of a bank we would have until there is some prospect of having the bank. When the time comes for that we do not think it will be difficult for the financiers to devise a system which for stability, reliability and flexibility will meet the wants of the people and supply them with the currency which business may require.

During the last Congress when the repeal of the State bank tax was under discussion, and when the bank plan formulated by Secretary Carlisle was under discussion, several plans were suggested, and previous to that several plans were proposed in this and in other Southern States for the establishment of State banks in anticipation of the repeal of the bank tax by Congress. There were many points in common in nearly all of these plans, the essential point of difference being that some, as in the case of the plan proposed by Mr. Carlisle, contemplated what might be briefly called an expansion of the national bank system, and investing it with some of the most desirable features of State banks. It admitted of other security for the notes issued than U. S. bonds, and authorized issuing notes to the full par value of the bonds deposited. This was also the idea of Mr. Springer, who became sponsor for the Carlisle plan, and who did more than any other one man in Congress to defeat the passage of the bill repealing the bank tax, thus preventing the establishment of State banks. The idea of enlarging the scope of the national banks was a good one, for the larger their scope, the fewer restrictions upon them compatible with safety, the better for them, and the more useful they would become to the people.

This much in a general way. While we favor national banks, which are useful and beneficial in their way, we want to see State banks free from Federal supervision and control of any kind and subject only to State laws and regulations and such supervision as the State may prescribe. We would not make the notes of either State or national banks a legal tender, but make them redeemable in coin (no discrimination between gold and silver) and at the bank of issue.

What some of the opponents of State banks have urged against them as the strongest objection—that is, that their notes would not pass current outside of the States in which they were issued—is, in our opinion, one of the very strong points in their favor. One of the serious defects in the present monetary system, combined with the tariff, is that it draws the money from the agricultural States of the South and the West and concentrates it in the manufacturing and commercial centers of the East, where now all the strong money combinations have their headquarters and from which they control the volume and the flow of money. The West can't move her grain crop nor the South her cotton crop until arrangements are made with these money manipulators to furnish the extra supply of money, over and above what the local banks hold, to move them.

Under the present system there is no way of remedying this defect, and no way of preventing the money of the country from flowing back Eastward, while the South and the West buy Eastern manufactures which they cannot or do not make themselves, and the internal revenue system is in operation, and the only money we have in circulation is a national money, as good in one section of the country as the other. What we need as a corrective of this circulating system, as a preventive of this constant and exhaustive drain, is a money local in its character, which will remain at home or which it goes from home will come back for redemption. Thus and thus only can the Southern States have a money of their own, which will stay with them or come back to them and make their people independent of the banks and the money lenders of the East.

MINOR MENTION.

It has been about as difficult to awaken an interest in good roads in this country as it has been to awaken an interest in diversified farming. But both are making some progress although neither is making as much as it should. Some time ago we called attention to the revolution that had been made in some sections of the State of New Jersey as a result of improved roads. As further proof of what good roads will do we clip from the Atlanta Journal the following condensation of an article on that subject written by Mr. John Gilmer Speed for Lippincott's Magazine for June:

"Mr. John Gilmer Speed gives an interesting account of some of the road work that has been done in that State. His account of the effect of good road construction on the country between Moorestown and Philadelphia, a distance of twelve miles, is very impressive. In this region there had been for years no demand for real estate. It had been found in many instances impossible to settle up estates there because there was no sale for lands. In 1888 the township issued $40,000 of road bonds. With the money thus obtained and with aid from the State twenty-four miles of road have been macadamized in the past six years.

'The result has been remarkable. All along these good roads land is in demand and can be sold readily at fine figures. Near Moorestown it brings almost city prices. Other towns in New Jersey which are better situated and have decided natural advantages over Moorestown, have not improved their roads and show the effect of that policy. Lands lying in such townships are a drug on the market and lots with good houses on them are offered for less than the houses cost.

"To show the difference between good roads and bad, Mr. Speed states that the wheelwrights of Burlington county, in which Moorestown is situated, formerly built four-horse wagons to carry fifty-five bushel baskets. This was considered a good load on the old roads. Now the wagon-makers are busy building two-horse wagons to carry from ninety to one hundred and twenty-five five bushel baskets.

'On the old roads two men and four horses with a wagon weighing 1,900 pounds would take two and a half tons to market and bring back an equal weight of manure. Now one man with two horses and a wagon weighing 2,300 pounds carries four tons each way and makes two trips a day where only one was possible on the old roads."

Upon this the Journal comments as follows:

"It is passing strange that the people of any community will endure the wear and waste and terrible tax of poor roads when good roads are proved to pay so well and when it has been so fully demonstrated that without them, progress and the best measure of prosperity are impossible.

It is passing strange. If the people of the United States were required to pay a tax for good roads or for any other purpose, one-third as heavy as the tax imposed on them by bad roads there would be a howl from one end of the country to the other.

* * *

The first declaration which we have had on the subject of State banks from bankers in their professional capacity came from the Georgia bankers in their meeting at Brunswick Wednesday. They favor State bank notes "under proper restrictions." In this they do not differ from others who favor bank notes, for all recognize the fact that without proper restrictions State banks or any other banks would be useless. There may be some difference of opinion as to what proper restrictions are, but these differences are not so radical that they cannot be harmonized. It is a point gained, however, for State banks when a bankers' convention pronounces in favor of them, for it gives them the backing of men who are supposed to know most about the money situation and to be most interested in keeping it in a sound and healthy condition. We are glad to see the bankers taking an interest in and favoring State banks, for we regard this as a question of vital importance to the country, but especially to the South, and the surest and most effective solution of the financial problem.

Chicago, the "Windy City," has a floating debt of about $6,000,000, and the question with her financiers is how to raise the wind and lift it.

CURRENT COMMENT.

—A curious instance of a rule working both ways is that the country's advancing wages is putting McKinley in a panic.—Phil. Times, Ind.

—Another voluntary increase of about 10 per cent. in the wages of all the blast furnace employes in the Mahoning Valley has been reported from Ohio. The roar of the blast furnaces in the valleys finds an echo in Prosperity's roar of delight after her long exile!—Phil. Record, Dem.

—The New York goldbug press continues to insist that an international monetary conference is impossible and that were one possible it would maintain the single gold standard. Such statements keep the prairie fires burning in the West and keep warm the fighting blood of the people.—St. Louis Republic, Dem.

Hon. James E. Campbell, of Ohio doesn't apprehend any trouble on the financial question when the Democratic convention meets. He says they will straddle on the silver question but will have a hard time in catching up with the Republicans in the straddle.

When a Kentucky man gets an idea into his head that he must shoot some one he doesn't need a thousand excuses. Daniel Warner, of Harrodsburg, shot Patrick Huggins the other day, and while he had is hand in killed himself. He had no particular reason for killing himself, and no particular reason for killing Huggins, as they had never quarreled, but there was somewhat of an unpleasantness between their wives.

BOOK NOTICES.

The Life of Napoleon, which has been running through McClure's Magazine, has been issued complete in a handsomely printed volume illustrated with 250 pictures. The life is a short one and is interestingly written. On the whole the work is a valuable one and is made more than ordinarily attractive by its artistic execution. Published by S. S. McClure, No 30 LaFayette Place, New York.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.

— Mr. Wm. Deal, a very old and highly respected citizen, died at his home a few miles from Maple Hill last Sunday afternoon.

— Maxton Scottish Chief: Mr. J. S. McQueen, an esteemed and well known citizen of this community, died Tuesday, in the 69th year of his age.

— Rocky Mount Phœnix: It is said that parties are negotiating for franchises to put in water works for the town and build at an early day an electric light plant. —— From one stump in Mr. Fulford's front yard there are growing two different varieties of plum. Each year they ripen at the same time, one being oblong and red and the other perfectly round and striped. They are both volunteers and never miss "hitting."

— Creenville Reflector: A day or two ago Mr. Jesse Speight received a letter that he prizes quite highly. It was written by his aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Speight, of Danville, Mo., who is 84 years old. With her husband, Mr. James Speight, she left North Carolina fifty years ago, going from Greene county, and located in Missouri. Her husband died two years ago. In her letter she said she had 63 grandchildren, 92 great grandchildren, and 6 great great grandchildren. Of this number of descendants 113 are now living. "So you see," said the aged lady, "I have quite a large family."

— Charlotte News: A conspicuous figure about the Federal court house is a tall, well built man, with long sinewy arms and big hands, a man who has the appearance of having been built for a fighter. He is perfectly blind, as can be seen by a glance at his sunken sockets. His name is Robinson and he is from Gaston county. He is here on business with the Federal court. Mr. Robinson lost his eyes in a fight. As he tells it, his opponent got him down. He was perfectly helpless, and the man on top of him said: "Now surrender, or I will punch out your eyes." He stubbornly refused to give up, and two fingers of his enemy's hand went down into his eyes, tearing the balls from the sockets.

Fluttering, No Appetite, Could not Sleep, Wind on Stomach.

"For a long time I had a terrible pain at my heart, which fluttered almost incessantly. I had no appetite and could not sleep. "IF THOU WERT TRUE AS FAIR."

If thou were true as thou art fair,
Love should for thee thy burden bear;
No service would his heart disdain,
Or deem it idle or in vain;
But fare thee well, too fair art thou;
So fare thee well forever now.

If thou were mine and mine alone,
Then shouldst thou reign upon love's throne;
But other hands may thine caress,
And other lips those lips may press;
So fare thee well! Unfair art thou.
Go, fare thee well forever now.

If thou a goddess wert divine,
Should all men worship at thy shrine?
Nay, prithee, think—is there not one
Who from thine altar would pass on,
Crying, "Fare thee well, more fairy thou,
Nay, fare thee well forever now?"

Yet tell me, thou, my own, my queen,
Art true as thou hast ever been,
And I thy servant still shall be,
Nor doubting, sing this song to thee
Of "Fare thee well," but, "Fair art thou,"
And "With me fare forever now."
—Samuel Waddington in Athenæum.

HENNESSY WAS ELEVATED.

Being an Incident Related to Support a Philosophical Proposition.

"Inherent in every person," said Frederick Upham Adams, "is a great talent for superintending. Man is naturally a 'boss.' The ability to be bossed is an acquired habit." Besides being chief smoke inspector Mr. Adams is strongly addicted to esoteric philosophy. "I recall an instance illustrative of this proposition," continued Mr. Adams as he sought a match. "Up Elgin way the section gang was out repairing the track. There were seven men in the outfit, including the section boss. It was pay day, and the executive had to go to Elgin to the pay car and get the money for his men. 'Hennessy,' he said to one of the men, 'kape an eye on the b'ys while I'm gone.'

"Section Boss Casey had turned the curve and was beyond view by the time Hennessy had his pipe alight and was ready to dischargo the functions of boss.

"'Fwat are yez doin, Mick?' he asked of his friend and late his equal one Durkin.

"'Cuttin wades,' replied Durkin.

"'Kape on cuttin them,' said Hennessy.

"'For why are yez packin that guage about, Misther McDermott?'

"'I'm seein is the thrack straight.'

"'Tis a good thing the gauge is better capable of measurin than the eye av yez since the day Jim Casey gev yo the wallop. An be sure ye kape them paralill.'

"'Fwat are yo thryin to do with the push buggy, McGinnis?' and the dignitary turned his superior gazo on the man who was taking liberties with the running gear of a wheelbarrow.

"'It's oilin it I am,' returned McGinnis, with humility.

"'Drop it, man; drop it. There's a job for the masther mechanic. Take that bar and tamp up thim ties. Fwat th' 'ell does any man av the name of McGinnis know about machinery?'

"Then," said Mr. Adams, "Hennessy sat on the hand car and cursed his slaves for two hours, at the end of which time Casey returned with the pay."—Chicago Times-Herald.

She Was Very Desperate.

The actions of a pretty girl attracted the attention of the passengers on a Market street car yesterday.

When she entered the car, there was nothing specially noticeable about her and she was not more noticed than any of the other female passengers. But it was not long before her peculiar actions had made her the observed of all observers. She was apparently in great distress and seemed to be laboring under great excitement. Her movements gave the impression that she was struggling to restrain herself from doing something desperate. Her face was flushed and one hand clutched the corner of her cape while the other was moving restlessly up and down the inside.

When the excitement had reached its highest point and all eyes were on her, she suddenly drew forth a knife and turned it toward herself.

It flashed upon the horrified passengers that she was going to stab herself and four or five gentlemen sprang toward her

The one behind her grabbed her arm and another caught her hand. Her excitement immediately vanished and her face broke into ripples of laughter as she said, "If you won't let me do it, one of you must pay my fare or cut my cape so I can get my purse; it has slipped into the lining."

When the conductor came forward, five very sheepish gentlemen each offered him a nickel for the young lady.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Few Can Walk Straight in the Dark.

In a small gathering the other evening some one proposed a trial of locating oneself in absolute darkness. Lamps and lights were extinguished, and then the first "victim," who had previously "taken the center of the stage," attempted to reach the door. No blindfold was employed, and the four or five "spectators" sat silent in their places awaiting the result. The "blind" groped for several minutes unsuccessfully and then bumped into a window quite opposite to the door from which he was to exit. Each person, with wits collected and all the "bearings" taken, made as bad blunders, and it was proved to these experimenters that locality is a faculty that grows with actual loss of vision, and that no one who is normally gifted can walk straight in the dark.—Boston Herald.

Gabrielli's Voice.

Gabrielli had a charming voice, but was so capricious that no one could tell when she was going to sing, even when cast for a part in opera. Once in Naples she became offended and refused to sing above a whisper. The king sent her to prison, where for 12 days she feasted the prisoners, entertaining them with her choicest selections. Set at liberty, she became more of a favorite than ever. It was she who asked Catherine the Great to pay her 5,000 ducats as salary. "Why, that is more than I pay my field marshals!" said the empress. "Then your majesty would better get your field marshals to sing for you," was the saucy reply.

SPORT IN THE VELDT.

A TALE OF GUNNING THAT WILL WARM A HUNTER'S BLOOD.

Game Birds That Are Gems Among Their Fellows—Wagon Life In a Wild Country Innocent of Farms and Fences—No Heavy Clothing to Encumber the Hunter.

Wagon life in the South African interior has of course its drawbacks, yet in a climate where for about seven months absolutely settled weather may be relied upon its pleasures outnumber them 50 to 1. To mount one's pony on a clear bright morning; to ride forth into the veldt with a friend and a brace of pointers, with the blessed feeling that you have not a care in the world beyond the march of your wagon to the next water; to be absolutely certain of some pretty shooting in a wild country innocent of farms and fences; to return to camp toward evening with perhaps 10 or 12 brace of birds and a small buck—these things, to the average healthy male, seem as near perfection as may be found in this vale of tears.

It is 8 o'clock on a bright April morning in South Bechuanaland. The air is full of light, brisk and wonderfully exhilarating. Four gunners have just breakfasted under the lee of their wagon. Now, having mounted their ponies—the average South African horse is seldom more than 14 hands—they ride quietly down the hither side of the shallow valley—"laagte," it is called in these parts—wherein they were outspanned, and climb the farther rise.

It is a picturesque scene. The slopes are clothed with a long growth of waving grass, now greenish yellow after the rains, amid which great bowlders of dark red rock crop up. Here and there small patches of blue green bush start out from the grassy veldt. Beyond, crowning the valley, begins a thickish woodland of short trees—bastard yellow wood, the Boers call them—which extends for some miles in front, till the great open plains are again reached. As the gunners ride up the farther slope their wagon is already in motion behind them, starting upon its day's trek, 17 miles to the next water. Through the clear, nimble air comes the crack of the driver's great whip and his shrill cries, hurled at the oxen, and the unwieldy home on wheels crushes slowly through the yielding sand. But now the gunners have spread out in line, and the pointers are already busy. Near some bowlders one of the dogs feathers a little, then stands, rigid as a figure of bronze. The two nearest gunners dismount. They already carry their guns and bandoliers and ride, as men do in the veldt, in their flannel shirts with their sleeves well rolled up the arms. There is little to encumber their movements. Breeches, gaiters and stout boots, a shirt and a shady hat are all that a man needs in Africa.

The reins are thrown over the ponies' necks and hang in front of them, and the nags will stand quietly for hours. Now the gunners are close upon the pointer, still standing with rigid tail and outstretched neck. These francolins lie close in the long grass. "Where the deuce"— On a sudden up spring three brown birds within five feet of the sportsmen. Twenty yards of law, the guns are up, two light reports from smokeless cartridges, and a brace of the birds hit the earth. Almost instantly a third report follows, and the near gunner has secured his right and left, not a difficult matter with these francolin.

But the pointer is not yet content. Another brace of birds is found and brought to bag within 30 yards. The partridges are now gathered. They prove to be the small Coqui francolin—"N'swimpi" the natives call them—perhaps the most beautiful game birds in the world. As one of them lies in the gunner's palm for a few moments, the bright nankin yellow and orange of the head, the clear, hawklike markings of the breast and the beautiful shape and feathering mark this partridge of Africa as a gem among its fellows. The birds are bestowed in a saddlebag, and the gunners mount and ride into the forest on the right hand side of the wagon road. Meanwhile their comrades have entered the woodland more to the left hand, and their guns can be heard already going.

For two hours the sportsmen quietly walk their horses through the forest, moving due west. Once their pointer gets into a small troop of guinea fowl delving for bulbs, and after a smart chase drives three of them into a tree, whence, as they fly off, the gunners secure them easily enough.

At length, after picking up a few butterflies in the forest clearings, for they carry a net, our gunners emerge upon broad, rolling, sun drenched plains, covered with long, pale yellow grass. Through these they ride steadily hour after hour, picking up every now and again a head or two of game. Now it is a brace of big red wing partridge (Orange river francolin); now one of those annoying yet handsome game birds, the black and white bustard—zwart koorhaan, the Boers call him—whose very noisy and chiding ways are familiar everywhere in open veldt in South Africa. Now, after keenest search, a leash of tiny bush quail are flushed and secured, one after the other having literally to be kicked up. A hare and a solitary "dikkop"—thick knee plover—are added to the growing bag.—Cor. London Review.

Greeley's Double.

During the life of Horace Greeley a man who resembled him—and nearly every town of any size had one such citizen—found his way impeded by the attentions thrust upon him, and which were intended for another man. He was a commonplace person who took no interest in the questions of the day, but possessed the famous facial resemblance which impressed strangers. Such a double of greatness had only to keep silence and look wise to be mistaken for his distinguished prototype.—Exchange.

Why General Butler Was Relieved.

Colonel Woodworth told some good stories about General Butler. He said that Butler himself told him as late as 1884 that he never knew the real reason why he was deprived of his military command by General Grant. It was only a few years ago that Woodworth got the facts from Grant's brother-in-law, Major Dent, who was the staff officer sent with the order for Butler's relief. He said that while no reason was openly given at the time, Butler was actually displaced because he was not a graduate of West Point. This would not appear on the face of it to be a sufficient cause, but Grant explained it to Dent one day in the course of a confidential interview.

"If," said he, "I were to send Butler a specific order to do something with his army, he might obey and he might not. He was too able and original not to reason himself into the belief that I might have given different instructions if I knew all that he knew of the local situation. He therefore almost always had a plan of his own that he thought was better than mine or anybody else's, so that I could never tell just what he would do or where he would be at a given time. Of course that was fatal to any systematic campaign, and I had to replace him with a West Pointer, whose first lesson in war is the necessity of prompt obedience to the commanding general. Butler was too brilliant to be reliable."—Boston Advertiser.

Haphazard Preaching.

A clergyman in Cushing, Me., is reported to have a unique way of securing texts. He passed around slips of paper, upon which the people wrote various texts that they would like to hear preached from. He then passed around a hat and gathered up the slips and asked a young lady present to choose one without looking. She drew forth the text, "What think ye?" upon which he preached, according to report, a very excellent sermon. This method is certainly unique, but we admit an old fashioned preference for a text selected early in the week and several days of careful thought and study devoted to the discourse preached upon it.—Augusta (Ga.) Journal.

Hats of the modern style were first made by a Swiss at Paris in 1404. Before that time hoods and caps were generally worn.

The boar's head used in a Cambridge college in 1579 cost 10 shillings.

NOT MORE.

My life has found its noontide, and my days
Have gone in quiet by to outward gaze,
In such side places have my feet been set,
So few of all my fellows have I met,
So small the ground my scanty strength could gain
To hoid and till. What wonder if the grain
I reap is told by short and slender sheaves,
And if where flowers might bloom are only leaves.
Yet shall I sorrow that my friends are few,
That wealth I have not, that my power to do
Is held in narrow bounds? The power to-be
Is mine, unchained, to grow as fast, as free
As winged wind that blows across the night
Or morning sunshine on a mountain height.
So I, dead poor, may have whereof to yield
To you, brave worker, in a wider field.
If what I am has blessed your lot, my own,
I ask not more than my still life has known.
—Amrilla Furber in Housekeeper.

A PRIMEVAL STORY.

Chug did not know that he belonged in the post-tertiary period of the world as he stood beside the tawny waters of a great inland sea whose waves gently washed the warm shores of the young earth.

He was in Kansas, although he was not aware of it, although as he stood he looked off into the northwest anxiously for the clouds that would bring rain to break the drought.

The little brook which now winds through the valley where he stood is a mere glimmering ghostlet of its mighty post tertiary predecessor, the sea.

Chug was young and lithe and stalwart, like the machairodus of the cataclysmic caves. His whole body was hard as wood and covered with a coat of thick nut brown hair that harmonized with the reddish beard that flowed over his broad chest as that of a post tertiary Peffer.

His heavy mane of weather beaten locks had never felt a hat.

About his loins from one shoulder was draped the skin of a cave lion.

A ponderous mace of flint lashed by leather thongs to the handle lay at his feet.

Chug, who derived his name from the sound of the mighty blow with which he smote to death the cave lion whose hide he wore, was not thinking of the pterodactyl from which he narrowly escaped the night before.

Nor did he notice the cyclopean crocodiles in the sea.

His thoughts were sad and roamed afar.

At a distance, too great for his computation, he had been born amid a little clan of post tertiarians.

A strange impulse, such as his brothers and sisters had never known, came over him.

The monosyllable conversation of his kin made him tired. Chug was wont to twine wild flowers in his hair and wear sandals of woolly hippopotamus hide.

"Spat-Spat," a young woman who could skin an Irish elk quicker than any woman of the clan and who scorned the luxury of sandals or robes of hide, one day pointed her reeking finger at Chug as she paused in her work and cried contemptuously, "Dude, dude!"

"You didn't say 'dude' when I saved you from the claws of the ichthyosaurus!" retorted Chug and passed on.

Thus Chug gathered up his weapons and went forth alone and wandered from his own fireside.

Long he had pondered over the mystery of life.

He had repeated in his sleep the refrain, "There are others."

If his clan existed, he argued, why not other clans somewhere?

Was it not possible that in their society he could lose that tired feeling which had so oppressed him?

But moons had come and waned, he had traversed unknown leagues of morass and forest, crossed the tide of rushing rivers, and still nothing but packs of great hyenas, trumpeting mammoths, giant graminivorous and carnivorous mammalia and monstrous reptiles and amphibia.

Man was nil, and woman existed not.

If Chug had lived nowadays, he would have known what troubled his breast.

He would have found love in the eyes of beauty and become happy.

Poor Chug did not understand love. His soul yearned unconsciously.

His thoughts went back homeward.

It had not been quite so bad there as in this solitude.

He thought of how he built a house for his mother of the ribs of a horned iguandon that in life was 70 feet long, with legs thick as the fluted columns of a Corinthian temple.

He recalled how he used to arise early and build the fire, and how he once had mashed his finger while chopping kindling with the old stone ax.

An idea came to him as he stood there looking across the great sea.

Why not float upon its bosom on a raft and mayhap come upon another people?

Chug worked with feverish fervor, and in two days was launched upon his hazardous journey.

But, alas, as he was putting to shore a few days thereafter, an air breathing, cold blooded pleiosaurus, which was hidden in the reeds, suddenly shot its horrible head at him, its long, flexible neck seeming like a monstrous serpent.

Chug pushed away madly, tore himself loose from the jagged jaws, but fainted across his raft, and the tawny waters bore it out to sea, the rude funeral car of a post tertiary hero.

For days the apparently dead voyager floated.

His system stood the strain, and the spark of life remained due to the fashion of the time of eating but once a week or so.

Chug had dined the day prior to his misadventure.

Old Chief Tushe-tushe of the fishermen at the mouth of the river, now known as the Arkansas, intercepted the raft and found Chug.

After due consideration among the tribe it was decided to put him to death.

The Tushe-tushes had dwelt by the sea many generations, and the legends gave their origin as the children of a gigantic mastodonsaurus which had formerly infested the coast.

Their village was on the site of the present city of Wichita, somewhere near the soap works, and was laid out in town lots even into the bed of the sea.

They were brown skinned, beardless, and with hair black as the alluvial soil and stiff as the whiskers of the giant post tertiary leopard.

Their numbers had brought about many improvements in the mode of living, such as wearing loin cloths of native grasses and the hanging of shells from the ear and nose.

For generations the fashion of flattening the forehead had prevailed.

Chug had small hands and feet, was hairy as a cave lion and wore whiskers, and besides his head was not flattened.

Such a monstrosity could not be permitted to live.

The natural curiosity of the Tushe-tushes, however, impelled them to nurse Chug to life to see what he was like when well.

The job of nursing Chug fell to Sunbird, the only daughter of the old chief.

She marveled at the brawny proportions of the strange voyager.

She whiled away the long hours by plaiting his whiskers and grooming his brown fur until he shone like a blooded carriage horse.

Sunbird was young and impressionable.

She had been wooed by every youth of the clan, had listened for awhile, and then repulsed every man of them.

No woman of the tribe was so beautifully shaped as Sunbird, nor was there so smart a flathead among the Tushe-tushes.

She had a Trilby foot and the shoulders of a Lillian Russell.

Her old father loved her devotedly, still he chided her.

"You are getting much too gay for the tribe, my precious darling," he would say in his blunt, rough way.

During Chug's convalescence his days were sweet with newness.

Instead of bullet headed Spat-Spat, covered with fur like a megatherium, here was a creature with a head like a triangle, and with a graceful figure, smooth and soft to the touch, and the broiled steak of post tertiary reindeer was charming to his palate.

The vocabulary of the language of Chug and Sunbird contained but 600 words and nurse and invalid could soon converse.

So happy was Chug that he hated to tell the story of the passion which filled his heart, and he reserved it from day to day.

But his stalwart form trembled with emotion as Sunbird's hand gently smoothed the fur of his broad shoulders.

When Sunbird's father comprehended the trend of affairs he did not grate his teeth because, as a matter of fact, he was a fish eater and toothless.

But he spoke his mind.

"Come—the jig is up!" he shouted, and dragged Chug to the place of execution.

This denouement astonished Chug so much that he was pinioned by withes of elastic bush before he could make up his mind to resist.

The executioner brandished a ponderous dinotherium tusk, when Sunbird dashed through the throng of Tushe-tushes and wrested it from him.

"Stand b-a-c-k!" she shrieked, with the furious mien of a post tertiary saber toothed tigress robbed of her cubs.

"I love him, and if he dies I d-i-e with him!" cried Sunbird as the tribesmen wavered before her as before the awful presence of a 50 foot high pterodactyl.

"What! that hairy animal with small hands and feet and little round head—that Populist freak!" yelled the old chief.

"I love him because he is so different from other men, papa. He is so perfectly unconventional!" replied Sunbird.

"That's all right," said old Tushe-tushe as he released Chug and blessed his children. "It will be my turn to laugh when you want a divorce, young woman! Remember that Chicago is only 20,000 years hence!"

But Chug eventually became chief of the tribe, and through his example the people became exceedingly mild mannered and took to whisker raising.—Kansas City Star.

He Mistrusted His Sex.

A Durham miner, aged 73, visited a Newcastle lawyer, a bachelor, for the purpose of making his will. The old man's property consisted of two small cottages, which had cost him £150, and a little furniture.

The lawyer having asked his client how he wished to dispose of his property, the latter replied:

"Ma auld woman has to hev all so lang as she's ma widdow. Efther that ma bairns gets all."

"What age is your old woman?" asked the lawyer.

"Seventy-two," replied the miner.

"And how long have you and your wife been married?" asked the lawyer.

"Over 50 years," replied the miner.

Thereupon the lawyer suggested to his client that he should give the wife the interest during her life, whether she continued a widow or otherwise.

"Hinney, I winnot. I'll hev me aan way," said the miner.

"But, surely," replied the lawyer, "you don't expect your old woman, now 72 years old, would marry again after your death?"

The miner, looking the lawyer full in the face, answered, with much solemnity:

"Wey, hinney, thor's nae knaaing what young cheps like yourself will do for money."—London Tit-Bits.

SHE SAW HIM HOME.

Despite His Misfortune, He Was Polite, and She Repaid Him.

It was on a Washington avenue car. The time, just before 6 o'clock, when the madding throng commences to rush westward for home, supper and rest.

He is one of the widely known men about town in the city, one whose intellectual brightness is frequently the theme for many tongues, but to offset his many good qualities he has one bad, and that, too, a very bad one, the habit of imbibing too freely of those liquid refreshments which frequently results in one's legs having a falling out with each other.

The car was crowded and several women were standing clingingly, almost toppling over every time the car started or stopped. One of these was a winsome little beauty, and the wonder only was that one of the brutes sitting down had not offered her his place, but he hadn't.

She was standing directly in front of him, and as she noted him and saw his condition, which was very "jagged," a look of recognition and embarrassment spread over her flowerlike face.

He didn't see her or any one else for a few moments, but presently looked up and saw the women standing. He appreciated fully the fact that he should offer his place to one of the number, but even more fully that if he tried to stand up he would fall down. He was in a most uncomfortable predicament.

Presently an inspiration came to him, and his face brightened like a glorious sunset, and he at once proceeded to carry out his idea.

Touching lightly upon the arm to attract her attention, he lifted his hat, and with a Chesterfieldian bow and smile said:

"Miss, I am really too drunk to stand, while I know I should offer you my place, but I can do the next best thing. You may sit in my lap."

There was a spasm of mirth in the car for a few moments, during which the young lady leaned over and said:

"Cousin, I thank you for your good intentions and courtesy, but I believe you have as much as you can carry now."

At the word cousin he looked somewhat startled, and when his wits were somewhat collected perceived that in reality it was his own fair coz.

She was true blue, too, for, when they arrived at his getting off place, she also got off, and saw him safely home.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THE GREEN GOODS TRADE.

Introducing a Conversation, a Temptation, an Explanation and a Moral.

A crowd of gentlemen were sitting in the real estate office of a reputable dealer talking about green goods. The conversation stretched to considerable length, and many incidents of the past in this green goods business were told, but finally the party broke up, leaving only the proprietor of the office and one other gentleman in the room. Both men knew each other well, and each knew the other to be a business man of good standing and some property. The proprietor of the office seemed very much interested in the subject of green goods and showed a desire by several remarks he made to learn something about the "stuff" and wished the gentleman who was remaining to tell him something more of what he knew of green goods and the operations of its workers. So the gentleman, without saying a word, rose and locked the office door, looked around very cautiously as though he was going to disclose some great secret to his friend in confidence, and seating himself near the proprietor of the office he took out a long wallet from his inside pocket and brought forth a bunch of ten new $1 bills.

"This is money which has never been spent," he remarked. He told his friend to examine the bills.

The friend tore off the band of paper which was around them, and after he had examined them their owner handed him an older $1 bill, which he took from his vest pocket, and asked his friend to compare the new bills with the old one. After he had done this the owner of the money said:

"Now, then, George, which is the good money?"

"Well, I should say it is all good money."

Then the owner put all the money back in his pocket except one of the new bills. Holding it before him and looking at it admiringly, he listened to hear if any one was near the office door and then said:

"Now, George, the price of these bills varies a little, but I can buy them for 50 and 51 cents apiece," and his friend opened his eyes in amazement, "and if you want any I will buy them for you."

His friend said nothing, but took the bill in his hand and examined it the second time. "Well, I never did any of this kind of business in my life, but this looks like as good money as I ever saw," and he was assured it was good enough to pass anywhere in the world without question.

After a little more talk about the bill and after a considerable evident struggle with his conscience as to whether he should depart from the legitimate methods of getting "good money" and embark with his friend in purchasing of some of the money which the sample in his hand represented he concluded that he would like to try a little of it, and he admitted as much to his friend. And when he was asked how much he would like to buy at these figures he said that to start with he thought not more than $5 worth for the first time. When he had taken the purchase money out and was about to hand it to his friend to make the purchase for him, his friend said:

"No, George. I see you are willing to buy the 'goods,' and that is all I want to know. I heard you say during the conversation this morning that you didn't believe a reputable business man would have anything to do with green goods, no matter how genuine it looked. Now, I said I could buy these dollars for 50 and 51 cents, not 50 or 51 cents, and you can go up to the treasury change window, where I got these, and buy all you want at that price, and the government will make 1 cent on every dollar you buy," and he went out of the office door, leaving his friend to enjoy the joke on himself alone.—Washington Post.

A Boy's Effort to Explain Things.

"Mamma, do you like to kiss Mrs. Jewhillaker?"

"No, dear."

"Do you think Mrs. Jewhillaker likes to kiss you?"

"I don't think she does."

"Then why do you and she always kiss when you meet?"

"I don't know, dear."

"Don't you think Mrs. Jewhillaker would rather you didn't kiss her?"

"I have no doubt of it."

"Wouldn't you rather Mrs. Jewhillaker didn't kiss you?"

"Oh, very much."

"Then that must be why."—Chicago Tribune.

Mirabeau's Trumpet Voice.

Mirabeau had a voice like a trumpet, and when he raised it in threat or denunciation the effect was awe inspiring. The impression he created was greatly heightened by his manner, his personal appearance being exceedingly imposing. He had a way of lifting his head and shaking it to give emphasis to his periods that made the beholders involuntarily draw back with fear.

The ritualistic use of candles in churches was forbidden in England in 1548.

The Way Ingenious Tradesmen Make Retail Purchases at Wholesale Rates.

It is not every one who knows how to take advantage of the difference between wholesale and retail prices. All up and down Broadway the wholesale stores display the sign, "No goods sold at retail," or the more emphatic announcement, "Positively no goods at retail." Inquiry at these places will only bring out the assurance that everything is sold by the dozen, if the stock be divisible in that way, but as no one wants a dozen hats, or a dozen neckties, or a dozen boxes of collars, or a dozen suits of clothes, the fact that the price by the dozen is about 20 or 30 per cent less than the retail price is neither a very comforting nor saving one.

The ingenious gentlemen who are "in trade" have found out a way to make retail purchases at wholesale rates and yet not transcend the commercial rule which prohibits wholesale men from engaging in retail business. When these clever fellows want a new necktie or two, provided there are no samples handy, they send around for "one-quarter dozen cravats" of such and such a pattern, or two men who wear the same size gloves will make a purchase of one-sixth of a dozen, while it is related with much glee among the Baums and the Bergs that one smart salesman put in a seriously worded order for "one-twelfth of a dozen brown derby hats, extra quality, size 7¼." He got the hat, and, moreover, he got it for $2.27, while its retail price would have been $3.50.—New York Sun.

ENCYCLOPÆDIA Britannica.

Complete in 25 Volumes

The Encyclopædia Britannica is not only a complete compendium of all knowledge, but it is a dictionary of biography, a record of inventions, a history of discoveries, a calendar of dates, a registry of events, a glossary of technical and scientific terms, a collection of mathematical, chemical, and mechanical formulas, a handbook of law, a medical guide.

Best Atlas in the World.

The most thorough and reliable key to business knowledge, a manual of games, sports and amusements, a theranus of statistics, a history of all countries and people, a storehouse of criticism, a treasury of curious learning, a vade mecum for the household and farm, as for the office and library, a repertory of useful information. If the professional or the business man should undertake to put upon his library shelves the special treaties, which would cover as wide a range of topics as those gathered in the Britannica, relating to his own pursuits, his purchases would extend over scores of volumes, some of them rare and expensive, and many of them not brought down to date.

Of all the works of reference now in the market, the Encyclopædia Britannica is not only the most comprehensive, but by far the cheapest, even at

The STAR will for a short time furnish this great work in Cloth binding at $1.60 per volume; in full sheep at $2.20 per volume, and will deliver the whole set upon payment of $5 cash, giving you long time to pay the balance.

The purchase of any Encyclopædia short of the best is not only bad judgment, but worse economy. The STAR will furnish you this, the greatest literary production of the century, at one-third the former price and on terms so accommodating that none need deny themselves the great advantage of owning this mine of information. Remember that the present is the only time we can call our own. We reserve the privilege of withdrawing this offer at any time. It is made as a favor to the STAR'S readers, and for the purpose of increasing our circulation. You are invited to call and examine the books, or send us your address for further particulars. Out of town subscribers can order by mail, and the books will be sent prepaid.

The Original Price of $8 Per Volume.

Heretofore this work could be obtained only at a great cost—from $125 to $200. It is now, for the first time, placed within reach of the masses. A saving of only 15 cents a day gives you this never-failing fountain of knowledge. Is it not worth such a slight effort to obtain it?

RUMORED ALLIANCE

Of the Southern Railway and Atlantic Coast Line.

NEW YORK, June 13.—It is reported here that the Southern Railway and Atlantic Coast Line has made an alliance. The Atlantic Coast Line comprises 1,179 miles of road under various names, including Richmond & Petersburg, Wilmington & Weldon, Northeastern Railroad, Manchester & Augusta, Wilson & Summerton, South & North Carolina, Central of South Carolina, and others.

RICHMOND, June 13.—Major Fred. R. Scott, Vice-President of the Atlantic Coast Line, was seen here just before midnight with reference to the reported alliance between the Southern Railway Company and his line, and said it was true that an alliance had been formed, but that it was not a matter of any significance whatever. "It is," he continued, "only such a friendly arrangement as railroads with like interests form any time. From the public standpoint it does not amount to anything."

By Cable to the Morning Star.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 13.—The commercial treaty between Russia and Japan, which has just been signed by the contracting parties, contains a paragraph providing that henceforth the duty upon petroleum imported into Japan shall be levied upon volume and not upon weight. This arrangement will work to the detriment of the United States, American oil being lighter than the product of Russia, though the latter is the cheaper. The Russians are delighted over the brilliant stroke accomplished by M. Dealette, Minister of Finance, in the conclusion of the treaty. Moreover, it is believed that in return for Russia's guaranteeing the Chinese Paris loan, she has obtained the territory between Nertzchinsk, in Asiatic Russia, and Port Arthur, which will be connected by railway, and the latter place used as a coaling station. It is understood that Russia will shortly take possession of Liao Tung territory, when it is expected that Germany, England and the United States will unite in asserting their rights.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

A Rally in Wheat—The July Option Closed at an Advance on Wednesday's Prices—Corn and Oats Higher—Pork Products Unchanged.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHICAGO, July 13.—Whilst the sentiment on wheat is not so radically bullish as it was a short time ago, and whilst the bears are regaining courage daily, short selling is yet attended with more or less danger. An example of this uncertainty and danger was found in to-day's market. The opening and first hour's trading was with the weakness of yesterday's market carried over, considerable long wheat, which has been held by the influential bulls, coming out, and prominent bear operators acting very aggressively. About the middle of the session the crowd found itself oversold and an effort to cover discovered the pit with comparatively free selling orders. The rational result was a rally. July wheat opened from 77⅜c to 77⅛c, sold between 77⅛c and 79¼c, closing at 78⅜—78⅝c—⅜c higher than yesterday. Cash wheat was ¼c per bushel lower early, but closed firm with the futures.

Corn—The weakness of wheat, with the bearish sentiment of the trade, caused a decline in corn prices at the opening, but a steadier feeling succeeded upon the recovery of wheat taking place. July corn opened at 50¼c, sold between that and 51½c, closing at 51c—⅜c higher than yesterday. Cash corn was weak early, but afterwards sold ¼c higher than yesterday.

Oats—Furthur heavy selling of oats took place at the opening this morning, the liquidation by longs not being completed. Two or three of the large commission houses were prominently identified with the selling side, the support apparently coming from shorts. The showers that fell yesterday and last night and the weakness of wheat were influences against firmness. When the other grains rallied, oats did the same. July closed ½c. higher than yesterday. Cash oats were steady and firm at the close.

Provisions—With the exception of temporary weakness at the start, provisions presented a fairly steady to firm tone to-day. Hogs were firmer and the influence which came from grain was in the main calculated to encourage buying. The trade was without notable feature. At the close July pork, lard and ribs were unchanged from yesterday.

SPOTS AND FUTURES

New York Sun's Review of the Cotton Market.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The Sun says: Cotton closed barely steady at a decline of four to five points with sales of 91,800 bales. Early in the day July and August were one to two points higher. Liverpool declined one point and closed quiet, the spot sales there were 10,000 bales at steady and unchanged prices. New Orleans declined three to four points. Port receipts 3,140, against 1,769 this day last week and 2,153 last year. Port exports 16,115 to Great Britain. Galveston declined 1-16c. Southern markets were generally quiet and unchanged. Spot prices here were unchanged; 37 bales sold for spinning. Bombay receipt for the week 49,000, against 45,000 last year. Total since January 1st, 1,268,000, against 1,386,000 for the same time last year.

To-day's features: Owing to a decline in Liverpool, favorable reports from some parts of the South, weakness in Manchester, and some selling for Southern and European, as well as a moderate amount of local long liquidation, prices declined. The decline was not great, however, because the crop advices are not uniformly favorable by any means. Moreover, Liverpool showed activity, wages continue to be advanced in this country, wheat showed a sharp rally this afternoon, and the feeling in the general business world is cheerful. Sooner or later much better prices are expected in the cotton trade regardless of temporary reactions due to the selling of some of the smaller bulls.

MEMPHIS CONVENTION.

ADVOCATES OF FREE COINAGE OF SILVER.

Report of the Committee on Resolutions Adopted Amid Tumultuous Applause—The Speeches, Etc.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MEMPHIS, TENN., June 13.—Notwithstanding the cloud that for a moment threatened to darken the horizon of the Free Silver Convention of Southern and Western States, in the shape of the bolting of prominent Democrats because of the advocacy of the abolition of party lines by one or two of the speakers, the end was harmony and there was no fight over the resolutions after they were read to the Convention, for the reason that they carefully avoided any differences calculated to produce discord. The resolutions advocate the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1, declare that international co-operation is not necessary, and attribute the recent hard times entirely to the demonetization of silver. Although nothing was said in the resolutions about abolition of party lines as proposed by Sibley, Stewart and others, the speakers of the day, almost without exception, took care to assert their Democracy and to repudiate any affiliation with either Republicans or Populists. The resolutions are as follows:

"Silver and gold coin have in all ages constituted the money of the world, were the money of the fathers of the Republic, the money of history and of the Constitution.

"The universal experience of mankind has demonstrated that the joint use of both silver and gold coin as money constitutes the most stable standard of value and that the full amount of both metals is necessary as a medium of exchange.

"The demonetization of either of these historic metals means an appreciation in the value of money, a fall in the prices of commodities, a diminutation of profits of legitimate business, a continuing increase in the burden of debts, a withdrawal of money from the channels of trade and industry where it no longer yields a safe and sure return and its idle accumulation in the banks and the great money centers of the country.

"There is no health or soundness in a financial system under which a hoarded dollar is productive of increase to its possessor, while an invested dollar includes a constantly diminishing return, and under which fortunes are made by the accretions of idle capital or destroyed by a persistent fall in the price of commodities and persistent dwindling in the margin of profits in almost every branch of useful industry. Such a system is a premium on sloth and a penalty upon industry, and such a system is that which the criminal legislation of 1873 has imposed upon this country."

Representative in Congress, H. D. Mone, of Mississippi, followed Senator Stewart. In his very first words he repudiated the abolition of party lines. He said: "I am here, a silver man from the crown of my head to the sole of my feet, and I am a Democrat all over. We find that the last Congress has failed to redeem its promises to the people, and it has failed, why? Because of the influemce of the Executive on the members of Congress. Unfortunately there were a good many members of Congress who preferred the public patronage which the administration was able to give to keeping their promises to their constituents. I tell you, my friends, I am one of those who believes that the Democratic party is quite able to settle this money question for itself without going outside. We however, welcome to the ranks of silver all those from other parties, while we believe we can settle this matter without depending upon them. You have been told that Andrew Jackson, the grand old Tennessee pillar of strength, was a gold bug. If that is so, we want to do just what Andrew Jackson did, declare for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. The gold bugs will tell you that the silver craze, as they call it, is about over, but they will be greatly deceived, if they think so."

Mr. Money was obliged to quit speaking early on account of a sore throat.

Private John Allen, of Mississippi, followed. Mr. Allen said in part: This is a contest between the best money, the best property and the best labor, and for my part I prefer that which has produced the best manhood in this country, and I take my stand on the side of the people and of labor as against the idle holders of idle capital. There will be men in this Convention who will taunt you with listening to a speech from that ex-Republican, ex-Populist, Senator Stewart, but when we looked in vain for help to New York, when our liberty at the polls was threatened, we found it in Nevada. But I say to Senator Stewart and others in this Convention, don't ask us to desert the Democratic party. I am not one of those who places party above principle, but I do belive that the safety of this country to-day lies with the great Democratic party. The great Democratic heart is stirred to its depths to-day on this question. The Democratic ship has not always had smooth sailing. Its hulk has been battered and some times it has not taken the right course, but we are going to put on new captains and new pilots and we are going to sail to victory. The Democratic party in its national platform is going to declare for the free and unlimited coinage of silver. We ask all those who believe in free silver and are yet not in the Democratic party to come into the ranks. When I hear people say this country cannot do things because other countries have failed to do them, I tell them that this country should set the pace in all the leading questions of the day, and that it can do it. Shame on the man in whose veins runs the blood of his revolutionary ancestors who comes here with the pitiful, contemptible plea that we are not able to establish our own financial policy. I am told every day that I should follow the head of the Democratic party. I believe that there is no head bigger than the great body of the Democratic people. I know the money interests are against us, but I do hope that the people of this land will not let Grover Cleveland have a corner on all the backbone of this country and will let him know that the American people will not longer consent to be bullied.

The Committee on Resolutions also introduced the following resolution which, like the platform, was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That a committee composed of one member from each State be appointed by the delegates thereof in this Convention, whose duty it shall be to correspond with the representative advocates of bimetallism, and bimetallic societies, in the different sections of the Union and devise measures to advance the cause of bimetallism throughout the United States. That this committee shall have power to call a National Conference of bimetallists, whenever in the opinion of the committee the cause of bimetallism can be advanced thereby. Said committee shall have power to fill all vacancies."

BANK ROBBERS

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

OMAHA, June 13.—Three men attempted to rob the safe of the Washington county bank at Calhoun, near here, last night, and then broke into the store of H. Rix, adjoining. The clerk was bound and gagged. The marshal and posse began a search and were joined by the Omaha police. One man was caught with a kit of burglar's tools and he was recognized by officers as Jim Elliott, a member of the famous Dink Wilson gang of safe-robbers. Wilson was electrocuted in New York last year.

AN ADROIT SWINDLER.

SUPERINTENDENT OF A SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Treasurer of a Silk Company—Arrested and in Prison in New York Charged with Forgery—Several Banks Swindled—The Losses Estimated at $150,000.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

NEW YORK June 13.—Albert S. Moore combined the superintendency of a Sunday school in Harlem with the treasurership of a silk company in Wall street, and the study of Tolstoi in his private library with the study of speculation on the Stock Exchange to such an extent and with such unfortunate results that he is now a prisoner in the Tombs on the charge of having swindled several banks in this city out of an amount estimated to be almost $150,000 by means of forgery. The names which he forged, according to the complaint, are those of Inman, Swann & Co., of No. 11 Cotton Exchange, Robert W. Inman and Geo. Menke, commission merchant, of Fourteen Green street. The banks which suffer, so far as known are the National Union Bank, the Bank of New York, the Southern National Bank, the United States National Bank and the Bank of America. The forgeries, Mr. Inman says, extend over the year.

Albert S. Moore is a well appearing, neatly dress, thoughtful-looking man of 35 years. He began his life's work as a schoolmaster, in a small town up the State. He was noted as a deeply-read student. When he came to New York for a larger sphere of action, some six years ago, he had no difficulty in securing a place with Inman, Swann & Co., the big brokers, at the head of which is John H. Inman. He progressed rapidly in the firm's favor, and showed so much ability that despite his lack of commercial training he was made bookkeeper, where his position was one of trust.

All went well until last November. Then one day Mr. John H. Inman was astonished at getting a quiet tip that his bookkeeper was speculating outside. He investigated and found that it was true. He went direct to Moore, so he said this afternoon, gave him three months advance salary and told him to put on his hat and never come back. "We do not allow our employes to speculate," said Mr. Inman, emphatically, this afternoon.

Mr. Moore took his hat and his salary, but did not go far. Right alongside of the Inman-Swan offices is the office of the East River Silk Company, which has a small factory near Astoria.

Mr. Robert W. Inman, a junior member of the firm of Inman, Swann & Co., has an interest in it. Mr. Moore had so far husbanded his resources that at the time Inman, Swann & Co. discharged him, he was treaurer of the East River Silk Co. and owned $20,000 of their capital stock of $50,000. So he simply turned into another door when he went to the Cotton Exchange in the mornings. There he remained and transacted business until to-day. He was in his office yesterday when an officer of the Union Bank called on Inman and just on the other side of the partition showed Mr. Inman three notes with the name of Inman, Swann & Co. written across them. They were issued by the East River Silk Co.

"They are forgeries!" exclaimed Mr. Inman at once. 'Who discounted them?'

"A. S. Moore," replied the bank officer, "and there are others—many, many others"

Consultations were held and it was decided to arrest Moore this morning. It was felt that he would not attempt to escape, and he did not. He came down to his office as usual this morning. Detective Doyle met him and took him to the Tombs Police Court. Lawyer Clinch appeared for him. He wished to waive examination, but was not allowed to do so, as it was not a formal hearing. He was remanded in $10,000 bail on a charge of forgery.

Mr. John H. Inman said this afternoon: "I am sure that Moore led no double life. He had no vices—except as it turns out that of forgery." Mr. Inman was inclined to criticise the banks which handled Moore's paper. "This thing," he said, "had been going on for a year, I understand, and the banks did not take the trouble to send down here to find out if the signature was genuine until yesterday. It's hard to tell how much bad paper Moore floated in that year. He never let any come to mature and so evaded discovery."

The loss will fall upon the banks which took the paper and upon the East River Silk Company, which is estimated to have assets valued at about $60,000. It is said that Moore lost the greater part of his stealings speculating in cotton. Moore lived with his wife and two children in comfortable, though quiet style.

CASHIER HOLLAND

Convicted of Embezzlement and Sentenced to Seven Years' Imprisonment in Albany Penitentiary.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., June 13.—T. R. Holland, the defaulting cashier of the Merchants' and Farmers' National Bank of the city, was convicted of embezzlement in the U. S. District Court here to-day, and was sentenced by Judge Dick to seven years in Albany, N. Y., penitentiary. Holland's defalcation amounted to $95,000. The maximum punishment is ten years and the minimum five years. The witnesses in the case were John M. Miller, Jr., National Bank Examiner, for the Government, and Dr. Joseph Graham, ex-Congressman Alexander and Maj. J. G. Harris for the defense. Dr. Graham testified to the failing health of the prisoner and the other two to his previous good character. His counsel, Messrs. Jones and Tillett pleaded eloquently for the minimum punishment and District Attorney Glenn argued with power for the maximum. The court room was crowded and there were many tearful eyes. The prisoner will be taken to Albany within a week. Before the discovery of his peculation he was a man of reputation and the greatest popularity.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

European Governments Doubt the Expediency of an International Conference.

By Cable to the Morning Star,

BERLIN, June 13.—The National Zeitung says that a majority of the Federal Governments have sent their replies to the inquiry of the Imperial Government in regard to the expediency of summoning an international conference on the currency question. Some of the Federal Governments oppose the project unqualifiedly, and others, while they do not directly oppose it, express doubt as to its feasibility. None of them express a desire to have the conference called, and generally the replies indicate a conviction that such a movement would not be be productive of positive results.

LOCUSTS APPEAR.

Devouring Crops in Southern Indiana.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, June 13.—A special to the Press from Elkhart, Ind., says: Yesterday afternoon grasshoppers appeared in clouds, and came down upon fields of grain, corn and grass in such numbers that everything seemed to be alive with them. They ate everything green, and left the fields bare and crops ruined.

WARM WIRELETS.

A Springfield, Ill., telegram says the decision of the lower court has been sustained by the Supreme Court, which holds the Whiskey Trust to be illegal.

The United States cruiser Raleigh, Captain Merritt Miller commanding, left New York yesterday for Key West, Fla., to take up patrol duty on the Florida and Gulf coasts in the endeavor to prevent Cuban filibustering expeditions.

The Ohio Populists have called their State Convention to meet August 1st and 2nd. The only candidate for the nomination for Governor is Jacob S. Coxey, who led the Coxey army to Washington in the Spring of 1894, and he will probably be placed at the head of the ticket.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

A QUESTION OF COMMON SENSE.

Nobody has a right to question your common sense, but allow me to ask you a question. Do you do your trading at the Racket Store? If you are not already trading there, why not? it is common sense to do so. Our goods are today the newest and freshest stock. Why is it so? for this reason, we are buying and receiving goods daily. We are today selling more goods for the hard dollar down than any other dry goods store in this city. Constantly turning stock over keeps it new and fresh. We will save you money. Well, how is that? simply this, we buy for cash and sell for cash. We have but one price and that price is the right price, and the same to all. What proof have we that our price is the right price? only this that our trade has increased since we started the one price system fully 50 per cent. This is no hoax, but a dead straight certainty. We have customers to go out on the one price system but they always come.

Our space is so limited we cannot give many prices but here goes a few. 1,000 Women's high crown smooth straw Sailor Hats, blue brown, at 5c. 1,000 Men's assorted Straw Hats, all good goods, worth from 10c to $1 each. To close this big lot of Men and Boys' Hats they are going at 10c each. Forty-five dozen high and low crowned banded trimmed Sailors at 10c each. 250 pair rubber bottom canvas top Shoes at 25 and 35c a pair. 1,200 yards Table Oil Cloth at 10c per yard. 100 fine Linen 6-4 Table Covers, colored borders with fringe, at 50c each, worth $1.00.

Sixty yards of pink dress Shirt Waist, silk, at 18c, worth 40c.

Gent's large Hemstitched Linen Handkerchiefs worth 15c, our price 7c.

Come to us when you want bargains, we will do you good and save you money.

We are on Front street opposite the Market House.

THE CAROLINA MUTUAL

Fire Insurance Company,
of Charlotte, N. C.

The CAROLINA MUTUAL is a strong NORTH CAROLINA Company. It is, however, a stock company, and issues absolutely non-participating and non-assessable policies. Its mutual feature consists in a charter provision, that one-third of its directors must be POLICY-HOLDERS who are NOT stockholders elected by the POLICY-HOLDERS; this is a very strong point, the policy-holders who have great interests at stake, have a share in the management of the Company, and will always know its condition. Better than this, the CAROLINA MUTUAL deposits all premiums received at this agency to their credit with the WILMINGTON SAVINGS AND TRUST COMPANY. This makes it practically a local company. The directors of the company are:

P. M. BROWN,
Of Brown, Weddington & Co.,

From Dr. Wm. H. Taylor, State Chemist and Professor of Chemistry and Toxicology, Medical College of Virginia:

LABORATORY OF STATE ASSAYER AND CHEMIST, RICHMOND, VA., MAY 2, 1895.

I have analyzed the Tivoli Hofbrau Beer, manufactured by the Robert Portner Brewing Company, of Alexandria, Va., and find that it is pure and, in all respects, of excellent quality. It is unexceptionable as a beverage, and I recommend it especially for medicinal use.

EVENING

Dress is requisite for all functional occasions. Defects and incongruities can be pardoned anywhere better than in a Full Dress Suit.

High-class tailoring like ours is an absolute necessity in a full dress outfit.

The slightest deviation from a perfect fit, first-class workmanship, or the prescribed materials is an offence that cannot be cendoned. The most critical and fastidious eye can discover no defects in any evening suit made at our establishment.

Dame Fashion could only smile her approval at each and every production of ours.

You'll certainly look swell if we provide your full dress attire.

Come and see samples—Full Drsss Suits $15 and up. Sack suits 12.50 and up. Special bargain in Plymouth Rock $3 pants.

Compound Syrup of Prunes, A Purely Vegetable Laxative.

PLEASANT to the taste and efficient in action.

Especially adapted to the wants of delicate women and children. It rarely or never causes griping; is pleasant to the taste, does not ferment, and its action is mild and prompt.

The Syrup contains Senna and Rhubarb, as chief agents, with a Syrup of Prunes as a vehicle, and correctives to prevent griping.

We sell a 50c bottle for 25c to introduce it.

The Happy Boy

Is the boy with a new pair of our comfortably-fitting Shoes. The older folks are equally well pleased with the fitting and wearing qualities of our Shoes—neat, easy to the foot, shapely and trim to the eye, satisfactory in wear and satisfactory in price.

If you haven't tried them, call in and let us fit you. We have any style or kind you desire, and at same price.

EVERYTHING REQUIRED

To supply a first class table is always found in our stock of staple and fancy groceries. Housekeepers in Wilmington fancy our goods, and we may add that they also fancy our prices. We don't wonder at that because it's exceedingly pleasant to find high quality and low prices brought together. We keep 'em together and that keeps our trade brisk. Come to the dollar saver's Mecca for your groceries. You'll fare best if you make your bill of fare more than fair by purchasing your groceries from our aggregation of everything in the line of Choice Table Supplies.
